It produces vegetables, livestock and fish, which are used exclusively to feed the county's inmate population. The farm's output represents approximately 45 percent of the jail's total consumption. Waveland to repair third well

BY JACQUI COCHRAN Waveland's Tide Street well

Waveland's Tide Street well may function after a two-year lapse, giving the city three water sources.

The board of aldermen approved advertisement for a repair estimate Wednesday following a request by utilities superintendent Michael Barnes

Barnes reported both of the city's functioning wells, at Gulf-side and Davis Streets, went out two weeks ago.

"We were able to get them both repaired in the same day," us aware the third back-up well was needed."

Barnes indicated no one knew the exact nature of the Tide Street well closure, but said he would like to advertise for someone to name the problem and price of repairs.

The board approved Barnes' request following 15 minutes of discussion on the exact service the advertisement would address.

The board approved the appointment of Dr. Herbert W. LeBourgeois as the city's animal shelter veterinarian despite objection from Ward 4

Alderman Stan Weidman.

Weidman cited the board's inability to know whether the appointment was honorary or a paid position, as his reason for opposition.

Discussion of a $1,500 "stipend" to Dr. LeBourgeois for services rendered to the animal shelter in 1991 caused Weidman to question financial obligation by the city.

Rappold said only the mayor could answer "if and what arrangements existed" between the veterinarian and the city.

State should create lottery now: Gollott

BY TRACI BONNEY

When it comes to the state lattery, some lawmakers think the Legislature should be ahead of the game.

Senator Tommy Gollott of Biloxi said Their day that he plans to introduce a proposal next month that would create a lottery if the voters pass a constitutional amendment in November repealing the state's prohibition on lotteries.

Gollott's contention is that such a proposal will tell the voters the state is ready, willing and able to enact legislation to set up a lottery. "If we don't do anything, that will send a message that we don't have the confidence they'll pass it."

His proposal, not yet written as of Friday morning, would contain specific details on the lottery, including:

-Profits: All profits would go into the general fund budget to be used by all state agencies, instead of being earmarked for use in specific areas such as education or social programs.

-Management: The state would contract with a private business to run and manage the lottery

Harag the state run it would mean having to have additional people, Gollott said, which the state can't afford.

Jackpots: He intends to propose that Missisappr and Louisiana work together to offer large and hots that could compete with Florida's.

Schator Vic Franckiewicz agreed that a specific proposal is a good idea, but differed with Gollott as to where the funds restrictions should be defined Franckiewicz said, "The restrictions on what all be done with the proceeds should be placed in the constitutional amendment instead of in the lottery proposal.

"I think it's misleading to the voters to pass a lotter; and say, 'Here's what we're going to do with the money,' when next session the Legislature could turn around and do whatever it wants to with it.

Whatever protections we may want to build in a ed to be in the constitution itself so the Legislature can't go around willy-nilly changing things."

Harper: No EPA regulations for aboveground fuel tanks

BY TRACI BONNEY

According to the experts, Todd's tanks are okay.

A Shoreline Park resident called the Sea Coast Echo office Thursday and voiced her concern that the three aboveground fuel storage taks behind the new Todd's convenience at Hwy. 603 and Central Avenue might present a hazard should evacuation from the subdivision be necessary.

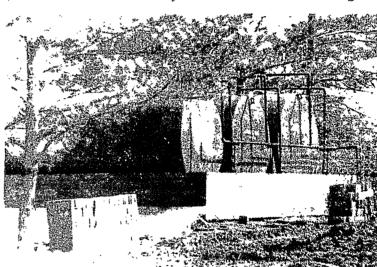

She said that if a tank were to explode, access to and from the neighborhood could be blocked, since Central is the only main road into and out of the subdivision. Some of her neighbors have no boat, so water transportation out of the area is not possible, she added.

John Harper, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency's Jackson office, said there are no state regulations for above ground fuel storage tanks, and the only federal regulations govern protection of

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Don't feel by proxy

"He calls me up and uses the phone to play a song for me on his tape recorder," my friend objected strongly. "That is his expression of feeling. I don't want that! No matter how poorly it's done, do something personal for me."

"Whatever is worth doing, is worth doing badly," G. K. Chesterton assures us.

It takes repeated reflection to realize fully just how true and powerful that statement is. We are not inclined to believe it, since we tend to doubt ourselves so often.

Because of our inherent inclination to belittle ourselves, our talents, our abilities and our ositive effect on others, we lean toward using the written spoken or sung material of others to express our most intimate feelings. Expression by proxy, vicarious expression of our feelings, or whatever we choose to call it, may also be due to a bit of laziness in some cases. It is so much easier to take a pre-packaged expression and adopt it as our own.

This works well in some instances, as in the use of popular greeting and get-well cards, singing telegrams and hired musicians in restaurants or at banquets.

However, there is an inherent danger in trying to express our feelings to another simply by playing a song and letting her/him listen to it. The rendition will likely seem distant and impersonal, even if it is exquisite and beautiful.

In spite of glaring imperfections, our loved ones want to see, hear and experience our own very unique creations and renditions of whatever we present to them.

In fact, we must come to realize and be fully convinced that the very defects and lapses of our personal performances have their own charm and vulnerable attraction. What we are looking for most of all in each other is some sign of passion and fire in expressing our affection. This is done best, not by a proxy performance, but by a very personal, freewheeling exposure of our feelings.

"Easier said than done," you may say. It definitely is. As a matter of fact, it is quite difficult, given our strong leaning toward low self-esteem.

Nonetheless, it is important for us to fight beyond that negative feeling of deficiency, to stick our nose out and dare to express our feelings with no veneer, no artificial stimulation and no substitute for a more talented source.

Yes, this is an act of daring, a deliberate exposure of ourselves to the possibility of being spurned, ridiculed, laughed at or put down through words and/or actions.

Our fear of being belittled, and criticized is so strong that most of us shun this act of daring most of the time, much to our loss and that of the people to whom we wish to show our feelings and affection.

Many people who have dared to rise above this numbing fear have discovered that present-ing the real "me" is not so bad after all. Thus, crude, homemade Christmas and other greeting cards have proven to be a big hit numerous times.

Likewise, clumsy, very personally constructed gifts are very pleasing to people who are not material-bound.

Plainly, simply, we cannot afford not to dare to go out on a limb and lay our feelings on the line for our loved ones.

Highest Call is reported by Word of Faith to be, "an energetic group of young people whose lives are committed to the Lord, and who gladly witness through music to the love and goodness of our God.

"The group is comprised of former students from Elim Bible Institute and others given to full-time ministry.

They have come together from various religious and social backgrounds, and have united their hearts to proclaim the glories of God t the land in a variety of churches.

"More than a concert, the goal of the group will be to draw God's people into a dynamic expression of prasie and worship and to respond to the voice of the Spirit expressed through prophetic word and song."

Word of Faith Christian Fellowship is located at the intersection of Old Spanish Trail and Henderson Street in Bay St. Louis.

Father Ken Hamilton, pastor of St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church in Bay St. Louis, has been named the 1992 Krewe of Real People honoree.

Krewe Captain Charles Johnson said Father Hamilton was chosen for the community involvement he has encouraged while at St. Rose over the past two years.

"As a speaker, his reputation has spread throughout the county. St. Rose is now filled with visitors from other parishes and other denominations.

"He has successfully initiated programs, to not only bring St. Rose parishioners back into church activities, but he has extended those involvements into the community.

"St. Rose church, along with the City of Bay St. Louis, has benefited from Father Ken's presence."

Another local resident who will receive recognition this year from the Krewe of Real People is Clementine "Tina" Williams, who has been named Grand Marshal of the parade.

The Grand Marshal is selected yearly among krewe members in recognition of community service."

How well Banks did in com-

Neshoba, for instance, gave Mabus only 2,324 votes or 30.7 percent of the vote in the governor's race, (Mabus' lowest percentage in any county) while Banks got 3,732 votes and a slight majority. In Rankin County, noted as one of the most staunchly-Republican counties in the state, Banks fared rather poorly with 34.3 percent to Dillard's 65.7 percent, but he still ran 2 percentage points ahead of Mabus. Hinds County, where both Banks and Dillard have served as state court judges and thus are better known to the legal profession as well as the general public, is perhaps a key benchmark. Banks won Hinds with

State Supreme Court race was rather unnoticed

With people's attention focused on the election of Mississippi's first Republican governor since 1874 in the Nov. 5 general election, virtually unnoticed was the rather remarkable outcome of the Central District state Supreme Court race the same day.

In what is the best untold story of 1991 state politics, black Supreme Court Justice Fred Banks, running as a Democrat, narrowly defeated his white Republican opponent, Hinds County Chancery Judge Chet Dillard; for the high court

Only a margin of 5,864 votes, or 1.6 percent of the 228,078 votes cast, separated the two candidates in the final official

However, consider this: Districtwide the voting age populaonly 42.1 percent black. Thus, white voters have a 57.9 percent majority.

Furthermore, the Central District includes a large chunk of east Mississippi counties which were known as strongholds of the Ku Klux Klan in the 1960s, among them Neshoba County, the scene of the infamous murders of three civil rights

The election returns from Neshoba County are a strong case in point of how significant Banks' victory was. Neshoba has only a 16.8 percent black voting age population. However, Banks received 50.9 percent of the Neshoba County votes cast in the Supreme Court race.

parison with his fellow Democrat, Gov. Ray Mabus, in the 22 counties of the Central District is quite revealing. Throughout the district, Mabus gathered only 46.3 percent of the vote, with Republican Kirk Fordice the winner with 52.1 percent, and Independent Shawn O'Hara, 1.6 percent.

Banks ran ahead of Mabus, percentage-wise, in every coun-

52.4 percent to Dillard's 47.6

was already carrying as both a black and a Democrat in what some perceived as a "Republican" year in Mississippi.

Banks, again, was certainly not running against a nobody. The 61-year-old Dillard had a 30-year public career as a judge, an assistant attorney-general, district attorney and state Commissioner of Public Safety.

True, Banks is not the first black to win election over a white candidate to a seat on the Supreme Court from the district. Former Justice Reuben Anderson did it in 1986, but his foe was not in the same league with a tough competition Banks faced.

Anderson's opponent then was Richard Barrett, the braying white supremacist whose candidacy was largely an embarrassment to the legal profession and civilized society. Only about 80,000 votes were cast, and Anderson won handily.

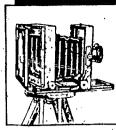

The resignation of Anderson in early 1991 opened the way for Banks, then a Hinds County Circuit judge, to be appointed by the governor to the high court, with the top recommendation of the Judicial Nominating Committee.

Banks ran a biracial campaign in his race against Dillard, enlisting many top business and professional leaders in the white community to take a public stand in his behalf. He had, according to best estimates, support of 90 percent of the legal profession in the

"This really says that people will support somebody who is a proven entity, regardless of his race," says Anderson, now in private practice in Jackson. "You could not find a more competent judge than Fred Banks.'

Unquestionably, thousands of white Mississippians did not allow racial prejudice to sway their judgment in filling a highly important public office. For Mississippi, that's a milestone...

A Weekly Editorial From Mississippi Economic Council

A time for a new economic beginning

A nationally recognized economic expert has serious but encouraging words for Mississippi.

Speaking at the annual Economic Symposium of the Deposit Guaranty National Bank in Jackson, Dr. Donald Ratajczak announced that Mississippi has suffered less than the rest of the nation in the economic recession, and he predicted slow and positive improvements for the state in the latter half of 1992.

Director of the Economic Forecasting Center at Georgia State University in Atlanta and widely recognized as an economic specialist, Dr. Ratajczak pointed out that while the nation as a whole saw a decline in its economy in 1991, Mississippi had, in fact, experienced economic growth, even if only at percent.

Speaking to an audience of Mississippi's business leaders, Dr. Ratajczak's words were frank, clear, and plain.

If Mississippi is going to improve its economic position, it must pick up the pace in its economic development efforts.

It must attract more businesses and more jobs to the state; it must find a way to end the exodus of its people; it must find a way to improve the quality of education offered to its people.

Mississippians have heard these words before. Now, however, with a new beginning—a new year and a new government—what better time to launch a new beginning in economic development?

In remaining us of what Mississippians must do, Dr. Ratajcazk has done us a favor.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI SENATE

By Senator Vic Franckiewicz

State lottery could be public or privately managed

The big news in the Senate last week was the lottery. Section 98 of Mississippi's 1890 Constitution totally prohibits

By a 37 to 12 vote, the Senate approved a resolution to allow the voters to repeal Section 98 of the Constitution. This measure now goes to the House of Representatives where it could be voted on early next week. If the House agrees to let the people vote, the repeal of Section 98 will be on the ballot in November.

It is not surprising that we had a spirited debate on the lottery. Most of the debate focused on an amendment to allow only a state-owned, state-operated

The idea here was to keep the profits of the lottery in Mississippi, to employ Mississippi people, and to keep out of state lottery companies from exercising too much influence in state government. This amendment failed, so as things stand now, the measure we passed would allow either a public or privately managed lottery. Setting up a lottery is more complicated than just repealing Section 98 of the Constitution. We still have to pass separate legislation to set up the operational nuts-and-bolts of a lottery. I'm sure we will be considering the additional legislation later during this session. Other activities last week were largely ceremonial. Legislators joined citizens from throughout Mississippi and surrounding states for the inauguration of Kirk Fordice as the state's 61st governor.

The chilling temperature did not deter the large crowd gathered on the south side of the Capitol. I was proud to see a large contingent of folks from the Gulf Coast in attendance.

Governor Fordice's inaugural address stressed the "Together, Forward" theme of the new administration. Pledging to work with legislators, Governor Fordice spoke of a cooperative effort to move Mississippi into a century of economic opportunity. Traditionally, a new gover-nor enjoys a "honeymoon" of cooperation with the legislature during the early part of his term. Because of this, many of us are eagerly awaiting Governor Fordice's specific legislative proposals so that we can begin working constructively on the state's problems. Please get in touch with me if you have any ideas about state government or the legislation we consider.

By mail, send your comm-ments to P.O. Box 1018, Jackson, MS 39215-1018. During the session, it is best to call me at 359-3454. On weekends, I can be reached in Bay St. Louis

Hancock citizens attend Farm Bureau meeting

Thirteen Farm Bureau members from Hancock County attended the 70th annual meeting of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation in Jackson earlier this month. They were among some 750 Farm Bureau members from across the state participating in the three-day meeting.

At the convention, the group took part in a wide range of activities, including the organization's annual business session, in which the delegates established policies on a variety of issues for 1992. They also took part in workshop on safety, the environment and farm commodities.

Featured at the meeting were speeches by Governor Kirk Fordice and U.S. Senator Trent Lott. The group was entertained by The Ambassadors, a Delta Community College musical group and by contestants in the annual Talent Find and Miss Farm Bureau competitions. The Hancock Bounty Farm Bureau was recognized for meeting its membership quota of 2,179 members.

COOKING UP STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

As I write this column on a brisk mid-winter day, I am getting quite happily "stewed" while anticipating several tasty meals in store with minimum effort on my part!

"Not to worry," as my grand-son's would say — I haven't "taken to the bottle" these days; I am just cooking up a variety of ever-so-hearty and nourishing stews for other winter days!

The secret of a good stew is, of course, in the slow, slow simmering, giving the ingredients and seasonings time to blend together for the fullest flavor (and, while all this is going on, I put my feet up on a comfortable stool while I take it easy and devour the latest "best seller" or other book).

So. I reason that if you're waiting around while one pot of stew simmers to a tasty finish, you might as well stir up another one or two! And if you're going to cut up those onions and potatoes and carrots and such for one stew, you might as well cut up a larger quantity and reap the dividends.

That's why a chicken stew and an old-fashioned lamb stew are cooking away (in separate pots, of course) atop the stove, while a pork stew is cooking itself in the crockpot. It's allbut-foolproof cookery, as long as you don't turn the fire up too high or forget to give the pot a glance, and perhaps a swift stir, from time to time!

Stews are even better when made ahead and reheated, to my mind and palate; they freeze quite well, also. And you can easily turn a stew into a meat pie with the addition of a pie crust, as well.

There's an extra bonus to stews - in these inflationary times (especially now, when we're still recovering from holiday splurges and dreading tax time ahead) they are an economic blessing to the lean pocketbook as well as a true blessing to the appetite. Stews may be made from leftovers, and the variety of ingredients is almost endless, from almost any kind of meat to all kinds of vegetables.

Stews may be made with just about any kind of meat, with mones or without bones (but the marrow in the bones adds such color and flavor to the stew!). Another important step: browning the meat before adding the vegetables and liquid adds full flavor and color. Here's one of my favorite stews:

RAGOUT OF PORK

21/2 lbs. boneless pork shoulder, in one-inch cubes 2Tblsp. oil or butter or margarine

4 cup flour

3 cups water (I use apple cider or white wine instead) 3 peppercorns, cracked itsp. sait

1 clove garlic, crushed ½ tsp. rosemary

4 onions, quartered 6 carrots, quartered crosswise

2 turnips, quartered 3 medium potatoes, quartered

To cook atop the stove: In a large casserole or saucepan, melt the butter or margarine (or pour in the oil). Brown the pork cubes on all sides, just a few at a time, then return all the meat to the pan.

Sprinkle the flour over, and stir until the flour is browned. Add the water (or cider or wine), the peppercorns (cracked), salt, crushed garlic clove and rosemary. Bring to boiling, then reduce the heat and simmer, covered, for an hour.

Add the onions, carrots, potatoes and turnips, and simmere, covered, for 30 minutes more or until the vegetables are tender. (6 to 8 servings)
